Chimpanzees live in groups in the damp hot forests of Africa. They spend a lot of their time looking for food. The group moves through the forest searching for tasty leaf buds and juicy fruits. Because chimpanzees are always on the move, they do not have a special home. Instead, each animal builds a new nest for itself each night in the branches of a tall tree.

Each morning, the chimpanzees climb down from their nests and go hunting for food. If one of them is lucky, it will chatter and bark to let the group know where the food is. Each group has a leader and all the chimpanzees must obey and follow him.
