Daniel was so excited that he was almost bouncing in the backseat of the car. It was his first trip to Disney World and he couldn't wait to get there. At first, it wasn't too bad. He played all the silly car games he could think of with his brother John and his parents. They even counted all the license plates from different states. After that, Daniel took a nap out of sheer boredom. But he couldn't sleep any longer and they were still hours from Disney World.

“This is so boring!” Daniel whined. “It’s more than boring,” John said. “It’s torture.” “You want to hear about torture?” Dad asked. “When I was about your age, Daniel, Grandma and Grandpa took your aunt Jan and me to Disney World. About halfway there, Grandpa ran over a nail and we got a flat tire. Luckily we had a spare but it took forever to change the tire.

“About fifty miles later, the engine died. Grandpa had to walk three miles to get to a pay phone and call for a tow truck. We had to pay for a cheap motel room for the night while the car was in the shop being fixed. The hotel was filthy and the shower only had cold water. Even the dinner next door was terrible.” “You must have been happy to get back on the road,” Daniel said. “Yes, we were,” Dad said. Daniel looked at his mom. “Do you have any road trip stories from when you were growing up?”

“As a matter of fact, I have four or five funny stories,” Mom said. “Do you want to hear them?” Daniel nodded and glanced at the clock on the dashboard. He hoped they’d have enough time to hear them all.
