One evening, my grandparents went for a walk. On the way back, they heard soft cries from the ground. A baby crow had fallen from its nest. It was lying on the road. It was in danger of being crushed by a cart.

My grandfather rushed forward. He gently picked it up and brought it home. My grandmother nursed him and fed him milk. Once the crow became stronger, we took him to the park and let him go.

That same evening, as we sat for dinner, we heard a familiar sound “Caw!Caw!” It was our crow. He had come back to visit us.

Soon he became our pet. He joined us at mealtimes. While we ate our food, he had his bowl of meat and vegetables. He was rather naughty. He would sometimes pull our dog’s tail. At times, he would sit on its back, demanding for a ride around the house!
